Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 1, there is insufficient description of the structure that provides for the mounting of the armrest in a pivotal or non-pivotal condition.

In claim 2, the recitation of the holes and bolts and the mounting of the armrest therewith is not clear. The orientation of the armrest bracket, along with the relative positions between the various holes and slots, the selective engagement of the bolts with the holes in the various orientations, and the resulting effect on the armrest, should be set forth for clarity and definiteness. The phrase "slot receiving said second bolt alternatively" is vague and confusing, and does not clearly and distinctly claim the invention.

Claim 3, in reciting a channel fro a cable, does not set forth a function or purpose for such cable.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Tenenboym et al.

Figure 3 shows structure as claimed, including a head portion 20 for selectively mounting the armrest in either a pivotal or non-pivotal condition.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tenenboym et al.

While the elongated slot is found on the armrest instead of the head portion of the bracket, to have simply formed the slot on the bracket rather than the armrest, is considered an obvious reversal of parts and would have been well within the level of skill in the art.

In regards to claim 3, the lower part of the head bracket portion appears to form a channel. Note that the phrase "configured to receive a cable" does not positively recite the cable and is given little patentable weight.

Regarding claim 5, the shape of the head portion is considered a matter of design choice.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

French, Frye et al, Kwasnik et al, and Bergin show various features of the invention.
